

Seventh Anniversary Observed at Marineland With Open House Parties

The South Bay's only nationally famous dining establishment, Marineland Restaurant on the Palos Verdes peninsula, will observe its seventh anniversary with a two-night celebration on Jan. 24 and 25.

Sparking the occasion will be "open house" parties, serving complimentary cocktails and hors d'oeuvres. This musical entertainment by The Barry Dane Show. The six-piece instrumental-vocal group, which just opened its initial engagement at Marineland Restaurant, will continue appearing in the "Porpoise Room" through Feb. 10.

Rita Ness, who doubles on the piano, is featured congress with the music-makers. Instrumentation includes Barry Dane, drums; singer; Mark Bradshaw on guitar; Andy Gados, sax; trumpet, piano, etc.; Donnie

"Boo-Boo" Holland, bass and comic; and vocalist Tony Roberts.

Marineland Restaurant was first opened by owner George M. Foster in 1955, four months after the unveiling of the adjacent oceanarium. With the start of its eighth year, Foster plans an imposing entertainment program for 1962, extending the "big-name" policy he inaugurated five years ago in the "Porpoise Room." The great array of musical artists will be announced soon as contracts have been signed.

The culinary attractions play no lesser role than those of the musical category. Marineland Restaurant's kitchen is ruled by Chef Dutch Holland and his departments live up to the intriguing menu, which not only features everything delicious in seafood, but also specializes in chicken, charcoal-broiled steaks and other meat dishes. The dining showplace is open seven days a week for luncheon, cocktails and dinner.

SS 'Japan Mail' To Be Delivered This Year

The SS "Japan Mail" now at Todd's outfitting berth is scheduled for delivery later this year. The SS "Washington Mail" was delivered to the American Mail Line Ltd., in December 1961. All three vessels were constructed under the direction of Captain S. J. Swanson, Chief of the American Mail Line Planning Division.

The Todd plant is also constructing a guided missile frigate (DLG-22) for the U.S. Navy.

The launching was witnessed by several thousand persons, including civic and state officials, employees and executives of the American Mail Line Ltd. and Todd Shipyards Corporation, and representatives of the U.S. Navy, U.S. Coast Guard, American Bureau of Shipping, and Local No. 9 of I.U.M.S.W.A.

Geodesic Dome Brings Success to ECC Grad

Success, by way of a geodesic dome, is in sight for an El Camino College 1961 graduate, James R. Howell—so much so, that he is now in the process of forming his own company.

According to Howell there has been nothing but acceptance for the dome since a model of it was shown last spring at the El Camino College annual Art Show. The impression at the art show was favorable enough to bring about the sale of the first full-scale dome for a thousand dollars.

Since then Howell has been kept busy making preparations for the showing of the dome at all of the main flower shows in California including the Pan Pacific Exhibit, and the Great Western Center Garden and Flower Show.

The dome, a semi-spherical structure, is not restricted to use as a "greenhouse," but can be used as a patio cover, lathe house, pool cover and for numerous other uses.

Howell states that the inspiration he received to "push the idea through" came from El Camino College industrial design instructor Robert Niece. Yet Howell, himself, has probably been the main reason for his success, for he has been described by El Camino faculty member Arthur Belial as "brilliant, with drive."

Howell is presently attending Long Beach State College part time with most of his time spent on arranging showings of the geodesic dome; he is planning to re-enter college full-time either next semester or next fall.
